

Tech Tips

A blog on Tech Tips, Online Tools and Software, Blogging, Mobile World, Tech News and Social Media

6th October, 2010, Tech Attitude.

Create an online store with Vendder and sell products online

Do you want to sell things online from your own website? Creating online site can require professional knack for things just about necessary. But with Vendder, you can create your own online store and sell your products from there. Its very easy to create categories and subcategories for your products and the interface is very user-friendly.

Vendder's intuitive interface makes it easy to manage the online store and it is fully customizable. Anyone can create his own online store without he hassle of server management, backups, updates, software, migration to another host, etc. You can just focus on your business to make it more profitable and maximize its reach to the customers. You can just the content for pricing and features, set up your payments account and you'll be rolling the next moment. You can manage your catalog easily and receive payments through various means.

Venderr can be easily integrated to your already existing website. You have options of modifying CSS and HTML to beautify the site. You can track the performance of your products in terms of their sales and also categorize them to make them easily browsable. You can keep track of all the products and activities going around in your store. The analytics is amazing as Venderr's intgration with Google Analytics delivers highly precise and broad data. You can also geo-target your products or services or let people use your store in various languages.

From clothes to music, and gadgets to software, you can use it to sell almost anything that you can produce in a commercial scale. You can view a demo (Showcase) on the site.